FATHERS' DAY.

Now comes the suggestion that the third Sunday in June be observed as Fathers' Day, the second Sunday in May having been made Mothers' Day. It is proposed to dedicate at least twenty-four hours each year to a contemplation of the part that father has had in the sum of the world's happiness and comfort.

But somehow the movement is not meeting with encouraging response. Father himself seems opposed to it. He knows that mother is deserving of all the honor that can be done her and he is willing to help pay her unstinted tribute; but when it comes to himself he balks. He is strongly averse to having a fuss made over him.

Father's business is to provide for mother, and that he will keep on doing with solicitude for her and the children and without looking for any sort of praise or glory, other than the supreme satisfaction that the loved ones in his dependence have all that his effort can give to them.

In those old volumes of sentimental poetry that lie beside the Bible and the album on the center table we find no rhymes turned about father. He has never inspired the bard. We hear no soft, sweet songs of his bended back and silver hair. He has never thrilled the soul of harmony. Now and then some jangler or jokester makes him the butt of ragtime wit, but even this distortion of art in his honor is ephemeral and fleeting. So he plods along—to office, factory or field—and he wants to be let alone.

He is willing that poets refrain from sobbing over him, that eulogiums be devoted to others and that the wreaths of laurel be left unplucked. He will continue to discourage the proposal of a Fathers' Day, but this is no reason why the recognition that is certainly due him should not be spread over the 365 days of the year.—Sacramento Union.

ANTEDILUVIAN UNCLES.

From Arizona come tales of the discovery of prehistoric relics. "In a cleft in a hill" southwest of Tempe was found "the semblance of a knife" made of copper. It should have oxidized in all these centuries, but we are too pleased with the discovery to be critical. In an ancient ruin west of Phoenix a certain bar-keeper "found three bells."

That is, in good truth, an important discovery. We assume, as a matter of course, that the "e" in the final word is an erroneous substitution for an "a." The find proves the ancients to have reached a degree of civilization as high as our own. Prehistoric pawnbroking must have been an interesting occupation, but no antediluvian uncle ever knew the generous thrill our uncles know of supplying funds for a summer vacation on the security of a winter wardrobe.

Giving up all hope of securing a conviction, owing to the death of two important witnesses for the prosecution the district attorney of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, last week moved the dismissal of sixty-two graft indictments found against members of the common council. Another reason assigned by him for making motion was that the sentiment in the community had veered around as to the graft prosecution. Three judges occupied the bench at the time, and the motion to dismiss the indictments was unanimously granted. The Pittsburgh graft scandal promised at one time to assume greater proportions than that of San Francisco. The former president of the common council accused of grafting is the only one of the many persons indicted who has been convicted and he is now serving a term in the western penitentiary.

Considerable complaint is made from several towns in this county from school trustees that they are unable to get in communication with Deputy District School Superintendent McKay of Goldfield regarding school matters. It is claimed that he does not answer letters. Mr. McKay is paid a salary to attend to school business in his district and should so do.

Despite his natural modesty, Senator Stephenson is being shoved right up alongside Lorimer, where everybody can see him.

Meanwhile, the steel trust doubtless will be trying to pry a technicality loose somewhere in an attempt to escape prosecution.

AN OIL TRUST POSSIBILITY

The Americans seem to be getting such a foothold in Guatemala as to make themselves practically masters of the unquiet Republic. The Senator Clark syndicate, as was announced some days ago, has all the metal mining concessions that Guatemala has to offer. That syndicate will do all the mining for metal in Guatemala as soon as the final arrangements are made, and the syndicate gets its machinery and men on the ground. It is an enormous concession, from which Guatemala ought to receive very great wealth; but the probability is that the president who granted the concession will himself be the recipient of what is paid.

The Tribune's special dispatch yesterday morning announced that, following the mining concession granted to Clark syndicate, the J. P. Morgan interests have obtained the complete control of the petroleum rights in the Republic of Guatemala. There has not heretofore been any great stir made about the discovery or production of oil in Guatemala. There is, in fact, no mention in the ordinary works of reference of oil found at all in that country. This does not necessarily imply, however, that oil may not be found there in more or less quantities, much less does it imply that oil companies could not be profitably organized in Guatemala. On the contrary, it is just possible that Guatemala, by reason of liberal concessions, loose laws, and lax administration, might be found to be an admirable place for the headquarters of such a corporation as the Standard Oil company, with liberty to do business in its own way in every country in the world. It might be made an admirable home for such a company, one out of reach of annoying anti-trust laws and stern and implacable courts.

AND THE PEOPLE PAY THE BILL.

The state police will soon be mounted, three thousand dollars having been appropriated for the purpose. Just what use will be made of the horses no one can satisfactorily explain. They will be useful, of course, to mount the governor's staff of mimic warriors on parade duty, but would they be of any service in the event of trouble in Ely, Tonopah, Goldfield, Las Vegas, Winnemucca, Elko or any town in the state except Carson City. The state police was organized for one purpose and one purpose only—to deal with situations that the local peace officers cannot handle.

Whenever the state police attempt to usurp the authority of a sheriff that is doing his best to preserve law and order in his county, just then will the death knell of that organization be rung. The state needs an armed force to preserve order and enforce the law when the local authorities are unable or unwilling to perform the duties of their officers; but occasions of this nature are not likely to arise in Nevada more than once or twice in a decade, and to keep more men on the force than will suffice for the nucleus of a fighting organization is ridiculous; to mount them is assinine.

The cost of keep for the horses would pay about one-fifth of the salary of the force required in quiet times. Should the force be called into action the horses would be useless. It would seem that the state police is to be made a dress parade organization; if such is the case no time should be lost in turning the bunch over to the gentle administrations of the headmen.—Ely Expositor.

The Toole bank robbers seem to be as adroit in hiding as they were audacious in taking. But the detective theory is that criminals always leave a clue, and it is up to the detectives to find that clue in this case.

When it is taken into consideration that J. J. Hill has just borrowed $600,000,000 for railroad expansion, one is tempted to make the allowance for the magnate's oft-repeated predictions of hard times.

The Lorimer investigating committee is to be clothed with "wide authority," says a dispatch. This should give members the opportunity to remove to a far corner when the inquiry warms up.

Events are daily strengthening our belief that the time has not yet arrived when the democracy would be justified in changing its party emblem.

The "Girl Pioneers of America" have organized. It is not reported they will undergo the rigorous hardships of wrestling weekly with the family washing.

The hoboes are hustling out of Kansas in a hurry; 18,000 harvest hands are called for there, and the hobo fears that he will be drafted for work.

Spain, it seem, wants some of that Morocco for herself, and France cries out in horrified surprise. A culture couldn't be more annoyed if a hawk ventured to interfere with its meal.

"I have no use for liars," says Col. Roosevelt. Well, now, wouldn't that jar you? And Senator Raynor had just dealt with his case, too!

Those Alaskans who burned Gifford Pinchot in effigy had better look out, or he will get after them for stealing public timber to do it with.

Tests to prevent mine horrors are being made in Pennsylvania. Why not tests to prevent a few of these increasing automobile horrors?

Representative Kahn of California continues to live up to his name, but this state objects to being the object at the other end of the string.

IDORA HAS A BIG HIT THIS WEEK

CROWDS DELIGHTED WITH THE GILFAIN TRIO AND APPLAUSE AND CHEERS CONTINUOUS.

Last evening the Idora presented the best program to its patrons it has billed since the popular playhouse opened, and the big theater was crowded to the doors. The main feature was the Gilfain Trio, and their act was simply immense. There is not a dull second from the time the curtain goes up until it goes down, and the applause is continuous. The team burlesques grand opera—that is, they burlesque the acting, but the singing is great. Mr. Gilfain has a fine tenor voice and Miss Gilfain's soprano is a delight to listen to.

The Highland fling and the bagpipes also made a big hit, and, taking the act, all in all, it is the liveliest the Idora has yet billed and the management is to be congratulated upon securing such excellent talent. The Gilfain Trio will appear again tonight.

Mr. Voss contributed a violin solo last night and his efforts are always greatly appreciated. Much credit is due the professor for helping to make the house the big success that it is today.

The pictures last night were simply fine and the one showing what Uncle Sam is doing at the canal zone was not only very interesting, but educational, and was almost the equal of a trip to that region.

For tonight there will be a fine line of pictures and parents need have no fear in allowing their children to attend the matinees or evening performances, as nothing but the most refined vaudeville and pictures are shown at this theater. Ten cents is the price of admission to any part of the big airy house.
